ABSTRACT

A technique and system for the quantitative and systematic processing and analysis of data emanating from various models of controllers connected to power-generating devices which produce digital and analog data related to their production of power.